THIS WAY TO CPA

WHY SHOULD YOU BECOME A CPA?

Be in Demand – Now and in the Future

CPAs have the skills and expertise that organizations need to succeed—today and in the future. Because earning your CPA combines business and finance fundamentals with important evolving skill sets like data analytics and new technologies like artificial intelligence, your expertise will always be valued.

Be Rewarded and Respected

CPAs have an exceptional reputation for their knowledge and integrity, and are part of an exclusive, regulated profession. That means there will always be plenty of career options, above-average salaries, and a path to rise to the top of organizations.

Be Able to Work Anywhere

The Canadian CPA designation is recognized around the world. In fact, over a thousand Alberta CPAs work outside of the country, including in the United States, Europe, Australia, the Caribbean, and more!

Step 1

Obtain a degree (in any discipline) and complete your required courses. An undergraduate accounting degree typically covers all required courses. But, don't worry—even if you haven't completed all of the courses, they are easy to take through a variety of institutions.

Step 2

Complete the CPA Professional Education Program (CPA PEP) while working. The two-year graduate-level CPA PEP adds to your technical skills (like assurance, finance, and data analytics) and professional skills (think teamwork, problem solving, and communication). And, you'll gain valuable experience (and be paid) while completing your practical experience requirements in an organization of your choice, including private or public companies, accounting firms, government, or not-for-profits.

Step 3

Pass the Common Final Examination (CFE). Prove you have what it takes by successfully challenging the rigorous multi-day examination that lets the world know you are ready to be who you want to be!
